

Domain Nature Hotel

Ranomafana National Park was only created in 1991. This fragment of mid-altitude rainforest first came to world attention with the discovery of the golden bamboo lemur in 1986. The hotel is a well-managed, friendly and popular hotel and is situated halfway between the village and the park. The dining room and bar areas offer a chance to meet the other guests, whilst the lodge itself is only a few minutes walk from the Ranomafana National Park entrance.

Fourteen bungalows set amongst the lush vegetation overlooking the river and is constructed with local materials offering comfortable accommodation for the traveler.

The reserve is rich in wildlife and hidden in the trees are 12 species of lemur, 100 species of birds, reptiles, butterflies and insects. There is equal variety in the vegetation and scenery, and enough pleasure in walking the well constructed trails to make a visit worthwhile. Be warned and prepared, although this is one of the most beautiful reserves, the trails are steep and arduous, it often rains and there are leeches. Picnic lunches are prepared for guests wishing to visit Ranomafana National Park. Breakfast and dinner is served at the hotel.
